Hello, welcome to the thread on 'Thee Backslacpkping With Media'. I am, %20, the entity responsible, if you have any questions don't hesitate to ask.

'Thee Backslacpkping With Media' (tBSWM) is a portrayal of the Star Wars phenomenon at the time of the release of 'Revenge of the Sith'. Consider the project a video archeology / media analysis documentary. Imagine being able to search through all the media from that time and have it recompiled/edited to pull out different themes and memes of the coverage. The titles of the chapters (http://www.noneinc.com/tBSWM/tBSWM_FAQ.html#DVDChapter) will give you a sense of what each one is about. If one sounds interesting there are options to play that chapter from the FAQ.

For instance if you're a PT fan there's a chapter on Hayden. If you're an OT fan, then the 'Opening Intro's New Hope Impact' might be for you. With 48 chapters there should be something for every SW fan and there's even room for segments which non-SW fans might appreciate, since often when people discuss Star Wars they often drift into other societal issues.

Viewing Warning : It's not recommended to watch this all at once, if ever. If a chapter sounds interesting try it out. Then go from there.

If you would like to watch the whole thing, but time is an issue, the FAQ has a schedule which lays out the possibility of watching one chapter a week for the next year, so that when the 5th anniversary of RotS comes next year, you'll be well informed.

http://www.noneinc.com/tBSWM/tBSWM_FAQ.html#ChapWeek

This week's chapter, 'Hype', explores how corporations, news outfits, individuals, and other media creators wound themselves up as the anticipation of the final Star Wars movie approached. Keep in mind all media presented was created/shown between the two months before to two months after RotS.

So that's the general approach of each chapter, you're viewing repurposed media from that time, cut-up and recompiled to investigate how society perceived/reacted to the Star Wars phenomenon. From hard news reports to the pseudo-news infotainment coverage, to the creations of fans who are attempting to expand the scope of fandom and culture, to the random hit-and-run types who have latched onto the massive cultural event for a quick comment. Some of this material maybe vaguely or outright familiar or possibly new, what I hope is that the editing allows the viewer a new viewpoint or additional insight into this time period.

http://www.noneinc.com/tBSWM/tBSWM_FAQ.html

Since this is a strange can of worms, don't worry about the level of questioning, just ask.

Alright, so it's been bothering me since this thread first appeared, and I HAVE to ask, what is, "Backslacpkping?" I thought you'd just misspelled "backslapping" in the thread title, but you keep spelling it that way. What's it mean? Is it a joke of some sort or something?

Everyone if you have any kind of question on this project, just ask it even if it seems odd. tBSWM has several layers which diverge into a wide range of subject matter, so it's difficult to explain in a simple sentence or two. Conversation might help.

Jedi Cow wrote: "what is, "Backslacpkping?" I thought you'd just misspelled "backslapping" in the thread title, but you keep spelling it that way. What's it mean? Is it a joke of some sort or something?"

The FAQ was set up to answer such questions, since the title was created on purpose to reflect some of the inner nature of this project.

http://www.noneinc.com/tBSWM/tBSWM_FAQ.html#Backslacpkping

"Because this project was partly a response to teh backstroke of the west, I wanted a back*something* word in the title. This piece bran in a shorter form focusing on the mistakes/gaffs by the talking heads. so backslapping seemed appropriate, since the final piece was going to be drawing attention to their reporting errors, they slacked on the facts. The word combination got the final approval when the translator into chinese returned 8 characters."

For those who like to read reviews, the review by FanEditOrg member Blueyoda does a great job attempting to explain what's churning under the surface of Thee Backslacpkping With Media. (scroll down in the pdf)

"Thee Backslacpkping With Media" might be a joke in your eyes, but the fact that there is a full DVD which can be downloaded or watched online may refute your view point for someone else. This is a different type of project then what tends to get played around these parts, i've done my best to explain things in the FAQ, ...maybe i've over explained. But watching a short part usually helps makes people understand what's going on so...

So if anyone's still reading, this weeks chapter which can be watched online or downloaded to any electronic device which can play video, is the 'Hayden Christensen Intro'. It is a short chapter (1 min. 16 seconds) which cut together the clips which were used to introduce Hayden in this time frame.
